New Construction

Imagine yourself at home in this spaclous residence on the east share of Lake Washington, featuring a large family house, guest quarters for visiting dignitaries, movie theater and arcade-same room, cavernous underground parking garage, and a computer support room with its own on-site staff, all connected by a series of underground service tunnels.

Gracing your walls will be 50 electronic "windows" and a large "video wall," connected by a high-speed ATM network. At the touch of a button or turn of a phrase, you'll be able to see thousands of Images from some of the world's greatest muse. ums. When you're not looking at art, the screens will electronically revert to motch the color and texture of the surrounding paneling - complete with appropriately "cast" shadows thanks to high-tech light-sampling devices. With construction costs estimated at $25 million, this 37,000 square foot, tostefully designed monstrosity is built into the side of a heavily wooded but unstable, steeply sloping 3.5 acre lot, making the house part residence, part corporate headquarters, and part retaining wall.

Built from wood and stone, this house is designed to show the possess of time. "Different materials show the effects of time differently [through decay]," explains one of the project's architects. When the house is finished, the lot will be reforested, both In deference to Mother Nature and to provide increased privacy.

A state-of-the-art (circa 2010) home monitoring system will track your position – as well as the location of all of your friends - using either pocket radio transmitters or face recognition to control every aspect of communications, security, and environment.

With a projected completion date of 1996, this home - gates around it and, soon, Gotes inside it - is the ideal residence for the billionaire computer executive who wants to plan his company's future by experiencing it today. - Simson L. Garfinkei
